Homework: Why should we protect ancient places like Machu Picchu?

We should protect places like Machu Picchu because of its structure. The bricks used for Machu Picchu are cut really precise, so there is no space between the bricks. Without modern machines, the Inca tribe built this place by hand and it stands to this day.

No one knows why or how it was built, but historians think it was a place for kings to go on vacation, scientists think, it was a place for ancient people to study the sky. While others think, it was a place to learn and study. Some think it was all three.

If we don't protect Machu Picchu, we would be losing a wonder of the world, a chance to learn about how people lived back in ancient times, a reason why it was even built in the first place!

That is why we should protect places like Machu Picchu!

Thank you,
